FIELD GUIDE · VOLUME ONE

HIDEOUT, MIAMI

You're not trying to learn DJing. You're building a field — calm, repetitive, inevitable. Miami doesn't need another DJ. It needs someone who sets a tone and lets people arrive into it.

Brice consumes. Breechay expresses.

00

What You're Actually Building

Signature: Amapiano x Black Coffee x Congo roots x Miami restraint

- Warm, percussive, rhythmic
- Not aggressive — no EDM drops
- Groove over energy spikes
- People sink into it, not jump to it

Slot	Feeling
4 – 7 PM	Cafe session. People don't notice consciously — but they adjust behavior. They stay longer, slow down.
9 PM	Slow build. The groove becomes visible.
Midnight	Floating, not exploding.

01

Your Setup

Two CDJs, Pioneer mixer, turntable with vinyl. Club-level rig. Real environment from day one.

- Left deck → Track A (current)
 - Right deck → Track B (incoming)
 - Mixer → blends them
 - USB formatted FAT32 — run all tracks through Rekordbox first

02

The Only Skill That Matters First

Forget effects. Forget tricks.

BEATMATCHING = ALIGNMENT OF RHYTHM

Same BPM + same phase = clean mix. Your African rhythm is your ear, not your hands — you will feel when something is slightly off before you can explain why. Trust that immediately. It's more reliable than the waveform.

DAILY DRILL

1. Load Track A (playing)
2. Load Track B (headphones only)
3. Match BPM manually using pitch slider
4. Tap cue until kicks line up
5. Slowly bring in Track B

30 minutes daily — clean beatmatch in 1 to 2 weeks.

03

Your Sound

You're not a DJ who plays amapiano. You are the person who introduces Miami to a feeling they didn't know they needed.

Core genres:

- Amapiano (primary) — 110–118 BPM, deep, percussive, minimal vocals
- Afro house — Black Coffee lane
- Afrobeat — light seasoning
- Congolese rhythms — selective, personal. Your secret weapon.

Artists to study, not copy:

- Black Coffee
- Kabza De Small
- DJ Maphorisa
- Kelvin Momo
- Caiiro
- Shimza

Most amapiano DJs in Miami don't have the Congo roots reference. When you weave it in — even subtly — people feel something different without knowing why. That's the edge.

04

The Structure of a Set

Don't play random songs. Build a journey. This is Black Coffee architecture in your language.

Phase 1 — Invitation

0 – 30 min — Soft, minimal, warm. People don't notice consciously — but they adjust behavior.

Phase 2 — Lock-in 30 – 90 min — Groove becomes consistent. Basslines deepen. Heads start nodding.

Phase 3 — Float

90 – 150 min — Hypnotic. Repetitive. No need to escalate. This is where you live.

Phase 4 — Release

Optional — Slightly more energy — but never chaotic.

05

Your Advantage

You're not just DJing. You control:

- The space (Hideout — you own it)
- The time (slow hours, after close)
- The audience (regulars who trust the room)

Most DJs don't get one of those. You have all three. The room adjusts to you — not the other way around.

Mixing Constraints (Non-Negotiable)

This is the difference between someone who understands music and someone who can hold a room. These are not guidelines. They are the rules your hands follow.

TRANSITIONS

- Minimum blend time: 45–90 seconds
- Never hard cut unless intentional — and rare
- Only mix at phrase boundaries: every 16 or 32 bars
- If unsure when to mix → wait longer

EQ BEHAVIOR

- Remove bass from incoming track first
- Swap bass gradually — never instantly
- Never have two heavy basslines clashing simultaneously
- Mids carry emotion — protect them always

TRACK SELECTION

- Same or adjacent BPM — plus or minus 2 max
- Same feeling family — don't jump moods
- Trust the long track: 6, 7, 8 minutes is not laziness, it's the point
- Let amapiano breathe — your instinct will want to act, resist it

Training Plan

Daily Practice Loop — 50 to 60 min

Block	Time	Work
Block 1 — Mechanics	15 min	Pure beatmatching. Same 2 tracks, repeat. Build the muscle memory.
Block 2 — Transitions	20 min	Long blends only. 45–90 seconds minimum. No rushing.
Block 3 — Feel	15–20 min	Play 3–4 tracks like a real set. No stopping. Record everything.

Weekly

- Listen back to every recorded session
 - Ask one question only: did this feel inevitable?
 - 3x per week: build one 20–30 min mini set and record it
 - First 10 sessions are just reacquaintance — don't judge them

08

Rules — Protect Your Taste

- No sudden drops
 - No crowd-pleasing panic
 - No switching genres to save energy
 - No overuse of effects
 - No mixing out too early — let it run longer than feels comfortable

09

What Makes You Different

Most DJs: react to crowd · chase energy · try to impress

You hold a line and let the room organize around it.

That's FORM applied to music.

10

The Breechay Signature

Calm before recognition. Repetition before variation. Groove before energy.

The test:

- If people start dancing too early → you went too fast
- If people stay longer than expected → you're correct

You're not becoming a DJ. You're becoming a reference point for a feeling in Miami. That's much bigger.

11

First Assignment

Do this today:

1. Download 10–15 tracks from Jacob's playlist: 110–118 BPM, deep, percussive, minimal vocals
2. Run them through Rekordbox, export to USB (FAT32)
3. Go to Hideout — slow hours or after close
4. Play 45 minutes. Slow. Patient. No rush to switch tracks. Record it.

If you do this right, people won't say "this DJ is good."

They'll say: "I don't know what it is, but this feels really good."
